Union Scores Important Victory at Chicago Today.

The Conditions of Settlement are Announced—Men Go To Work Immediately—Agreement Reached Thursday—Further News of Wednesday's Trouble.

CHICAGO, June 5.—After an all night conference, a settlement between the packers and their teamsters was reached at 4:15 o'clock this morning. The settlement was a compromise, but the Union has scored an important victory. The wage scale as provided for in the agreement is:

Cart drivers, 18 cents an hour; single wagon drivers, 20 cents; two horse drivers, 22 1-2 cents; four horse drivers, 27 1-2 cents; six horse drivers, 30 cents an hour. Teamsters shall be paid from the time they take up their time checks until they return the same, less one half hour for lunch. There shall be no work performed on Labor Day.

Any teamster now receiving more than the stipulated scale shall not suffer any reduction because of the agreement entered into. A meeting of the packing house teamsters was held this morning to ratify the agreement and the pickets will be withdrawn. The men returned to work immediately after the agreement was ratified.

All strikers shall be reinstated without prejudice. Any sympathizer who resigned his position rather than take the place of a striker shall be reinstated.

Three hundred teamsters, packers and other men remained in the committee rooms and lobby of the Grand Pacific Hotel all night. The compromise was not made until daylight when every one was tired out and anxious for any conclusion that would permit them to get some sleep. After resting a few hours the strike leaders were up again and among the teamsters. The strikers received the news as tidings of a victory. By the new scale the least they can earn for a full week of seventy hours is $12.60. Heretofore they have been paid, in some cases, $13.50 for a week of 120 hours. The maximum will be $21. The packers stuck to their refusal to employ only union men, but agreed not to discriminate against them.

Labor organizations joined in a justification this morning over the settlement of the teamsters' strike. Scores of wagons left the stock yards manned by the men who were yesterday on a strike. Cheers greeted these men at every step.

The boycott on butchers was declared off. The coal and ice drivers called off their boycott and joined in the celebration. Each wagon was decorated by the teamsters and at every step of their march to the yards they joined in the cheering. Yesterday where riot and bloodshed held full sway, today was peace and rejoicing.

HOW IT WAS DONE

Mr. Job Took First Steps Looking to Settlement of the Trouble at Chicago.

Chicago, June 5.—F. W. Job, chairman of the State board of arbitration, took the first steps looking to a settlement of the trouble which was reached this morning. Encouraged by his success in ending the strike of the department store drivers, and seeing the increase of the riots and the attending bloodshed, Mr. Job visited Mayor Harrison and proposed a meeting between the representatives of each side. Both sides were ready to discuss the termination of the war.

The meeting was arranged to be held at the Grand Pacific Hotel in the evening. In the afternoon, the packers had met at the hotel and talked over the demands of the strikers and prepared a statement of their case. At the same time, the teamsters had held a meeting and talked over the concessions they would grant. With the opening of the talk between the men, the teamsters read their grievances. The packers replied with a statement of what they would concede. There came a block at this point.

The first provision on the question of union labor was a stumbling block. The strikers demanded a recognition of their union. The packers refused it. Then the arbitration committee made suggestions but for hours without avail. The board gradually changed the wording of the provision until it read as adopted.

The question of the appointment of a steward for each barn the packers would not concede. They finally saw no reason why the stewards should not be retained.

PACKERS WERE OBSCURE.

Chicago, June 5.—Early this morning after four hours of consultation in which the question of recognition of the union was thoroughly discussed, an agreement between the packers and strikers regarding wages and hours was decided on. The representathe most formidable in numbers and in daring of any of the crowds that gathered during the day. Before this mob could be dispersed the police were compelled to use revolvers. More than 50 shots were fired, bullets passing over the heads of the crowd, which finally became frightened and scattered, but not until many of the rioters and policemen had suffered serious injuries.

A pitched battle was fought between a crowd of negroes, imported from St. Louis to take the places of the striking yard teamsters, and toughs and strikers at Forty-fifth street and Center avenue, in which six negroes were badly injured, two possibly mortally. The substitutes were driving wagons when they were assaulted. Many of their assailants were armed with ice pike poles they had seized from ice wagons and in the fight the negroes were badly lacerated by these weapons.

It is doubtful if the packers will again try to move their wagons in a big body. It was thought that in this way the police could better protect them, but the day's developments have shown the contrary to be true. Following is a partial list of the injured: Edward Schiman, driver; Miss Carrie Schowald; John J. McGuire, policeman; John Linenclaj, police man; Gus Billings; Nicholas Cully driver; Policeman Curry; Chris Eckels, driver; Albert Wagner, driver; Cornelius Ryan, policeman; John Monahan, said to be union teamster; George Scribner, policeman; Edward Rohr, policeman; John Johnson, driver; Charles Wright; W. W. Parrish, driver; George Siegros; E. L. Lewis driver; Philip Ryan; J. Bowell; M. H. Sheppard, wholesale salesman for Swift & Co.; Police Captain George M. Shippy; Police Sergeant Supply Wm. Granger, policeman; J. B. Todd C. B. Boyeston; T. Donellan, and J. O'Sullivan, policeman.

He thanked the President and Taft and hoped that the conference would be mutually satisfactory.

LEADERS

CLAIM VICTORY OVER THE COAL OPERATORS.

ATTEMPT MADE TO WRECK AN ERIE TRAIN.

MANY STRIKERS HELD AT BAY

By a Single Man—Pumps at Pittston All Working—Miners' Strike To Date.

Wilkesbarre, Pa. June 5.—More fireman, engineers and pumpmen joined the strike of the anthracite miners today and the leaders claim their victory over the operators is complete. The operators continue to import non-union men from all parts of the east, but many of these men are persuaded by the strikers to return to their homes. President John Mitchell says that a large number of these non-union workers are brought into the region under false pretenses.

Hazleton, Pa., June 5.—The development in today's strike situation was the number of non-union men arriving and the number of foremen leaving their positions. No disorder is reported today. Pittston, June 5.—An attempt was made early this morning to wreck an Erie train upon which a number of non-union mine men employed by the Erie company were riding to their work. Stones and poles were piled upon the tracks at Hazleton but the obstruction was discovered in time to prevent a disaster.

Wilkesbarre, Pa., June 5.—In a fight here last night Joe Harrison, a non-union fireman, held 1000 strikers at bay. He was going home from the mines when some one threw a stone. He fled, chased by the crowd for a mile, was cornered, and opened fire with a revolver. The strikers felt back. Harrison's little slips rushed to his arms, and the crowd, afraid of injuring them, left him.

Pittston, Pa., June 5.—Stopping non-union men on their way to work and endeavoring to persuade them to join their ranks, by placing a big pile of stones on the Erie tracks and hanging a few effigies in front of houses of non-union men constituted the work of the strikers hereabouts this morning. There was no violence. All of the pumps are said to be in operations and no damage has thus far resulted to the mines.

PRESIDENT APPEALED TO.

New York, June 5.—At a meeting of the New York board of trade and transportation Oscar S. Strauss presiding, resolutions were adopted urging Pres. Roosevelt to appoint a commissioner to investigate the situation in the anthracite regions and to see if the mine operators could not be induced to arbitrate their differences. Such power, it was declared, was vested in the chief executive by charter 1063 of the federal laws dealing with differences or controversies which may affect interstate transportation and commerce.

INDIANA

DEMOCRATS NOMINATE STRONG TICKET

REPUBLICANS ARE BLAMED FOR THE TRUSTS.

AN OUTLINE OF THE PLATFORM.

Which Favors Independent Filipino Government—A Lack of Friction is Notable.

Indianapolis, June 5.—The Democratic State Convention here was remarkable for its lack of discord, candidates for all but three of the offices being chosen by acclamation. Following are the nominations: For secretary of state, Alfred Schoenover, of Attica, for attorney general, William E. Stillwell, of Gibson county; for state auditor, James P. Riggs, of Sullivan; for state treasurer, Jerome Herff, of Peru; for clerk of supreme court, Adam Heimberger, for superintendent of public instruction, Samuel J. Scott, of Jeffersonville; for state statistician, Myron D. King, of Marion county; for state geologist, Edward Bassett; for judge of the supreme court, T. E. Howard, of South Bend.

While there was no fight in the convention proper, there was a contest in the meeting of the committee on resolutions. A number of the friends of William J. Bryan from the Second district were earnestly in favor of the insertion in the platform of a plank endorsing him and the Kansas City platform.

The majority of the committee was against any such endorsement, saying they considered it out of place at the present time to inject Mr. Bryan's name into the state campaign.

The Philippine plank also created much discussion, the committee being called upon to consider all sorts of propositions in behalf of the Filipinos, some of them being in favor of immediate and complete independence. It was only after hours of argument that the plank was agreed upon in the form in which it appears in the platform.

The platform as adopted, is, in part, as follows:

"We denounce the Republican party for its surrender to and alliance with the trusts, and we favor such legislation as will suppress and destroy all trusts or combinations to control the production and the price of commodities.

"We denounce the Dingley tariff law as the breeder of trusts and demand that tariff duties shall be levied for the purpose of revenue only and limited by the needs of the Government, honestly and economically administered.

"We condemn the Republican party for refusing to give interstate commerce commission power to enforce its decisions against discriminations on the railroad rates, which discriminations have been a potent cause of the creation and maintenance of trusts, and we demand that the commission be given power to suppress this evil.

Continuing, the platform favors the restoration and expansion of our merchant marine, and to this end demands the reformation of our navigation and tariff laws; denounces the ship subsidy bill recently enacted by the United States Senate as an iniquitous appropriation of public funds for private purposes, and a wasteful, illogical and useless attempt to overcome by subsidy the obstructions raised by Republican legislation to the growth and development of American commerce on the seas, opposes the Fowler bank bill, proposed bank centralization and the formation of a great banking trust; recognizes as an economic fact the increase of standard money arising from the vast increased production of gold from our own and foreign mines as a demonstration of the truth of the quantitative theory of money, denounces the Philippine policy of the present administration, and favors an immediate declaration of the Nation's purpose to assist the Filipinos to establish for themselves an independent government, protecting them from outside interference and securing to this country such commercial and naval rights and advantages as would be just and fully and fairly protect American interests.

The platform further congratulates the republic of Cuba upon its entering into the family of nations and deprecates the cruel and wanton destruction of the republics of South Africa; favors the construction and control of an isthmian canal; favors the election of United States Senators by popular vote; favors freedom of debate in the legislative bodies of the State and Nation; deprecates the death of President McKinley; denounces anarchy in all its forms and declares that it shall not be permitted to find an abiding place in this country.

The platform ends by condemning the governor of Indiana for violation of the constitution and the laws of the United States and the State of Indiana in his refusal to honor the requisition of the governor of Kentucky upon regularly returned indictments for murder against fugitives from justice.

Chairman John Kern in his address before the convention said in part: "Our opponents facing the past are seeking to commence the work of conquest and subjugation where Caesar and George III left off. The spacious and eloquent pleas of Roosevelt, Lodge and Beveridge for the conquest of distant lands are but reproductions of the arguments made in favor of the subjugation of Greece, the partition of Poland, the destruction of Hungary, the spoliation of the Dutch and republics in South Africa, and the oppression of our own revolutionary fathers."

A CLOSE RACE

THE SENATE PHILIPPINE BILL.

After a debate lasting some two months, the Senate passed the Philippine bill by practically a party vote. Senators Hoar of Massachusetts, and Mason of Illinois, were the only Republicans who voted with the Democrats against the measure. Senator McLean of South Carolina, whose political status has been doubtful for some time, voted with the Republicans for the bill, and Senator Wellington of Maryland, who left the Republican party on the imperial issue, voted against it.

The sensational debate called out the strongest men on both sides, but the discussion drifted into the Philippine policy of the administration more than on the details of the bill itself. The bill, however, has been pointed out to be very objectionable in many respects for it actually provides for opportunities for syndicates and capitalistic combinations to secure control of great tracts of land, which should belong to the people of the islands and be at their disposal. This has been modified in a degree. The Bill of rights of the constitution was at the last incorporated in the bill, except the two most important guarantees, the habeas corpus and the right of trial by jury. We would overturn governments in the United States to maintain these vital guarantees of personal liberty and rights, but we impose their abolition on the Filipinos. The intent and purpose of the bill is to hold the Philippines permanently as a colonial possession, governed by such agents, civil and military as we may send to them, and this is the material issue the bill presents, and on which the American people will record their judgment before the year closes. It is the issue of imperialism. We do not want the islands as colonies, that is certain.

The Senate bill will be antagonized when it goes to the House by a Philippine bill introduced by Mr. Cooper, of Wisconsin, and supported by the insular committee of that branch of Congress. This bill is more liberal than the Senate bill. It lays out a plan for civil government in the islands provides for the election of a Philippine legislature, and fixes the time for its assembling. The Senate bill does neither. Under the House bill the President is to decide and announce the time when the insurrection is suppressed. After that announcement is made the work of taking the census and organizing society on the principles of representative government is to proceed in a definite way and without interruption. Under the Lodge bill no such thing is contemplated. It stands for an indefinite term of foreign rule.

A decision will be reached by the House without prolonged debate, and the probabilities are that the bill which will become a law will be the outcome of a conference committee.

President Roosevelt apologizes for the barbarities in the Philippines because there are lynchings in this country, and says: "The men who fail to condemn these lynchings, and yet clamor about what has been done in the Philippines, are indeed guilty of neglecting the beam in their eye while taunting their brother about the mote in his." "Very true, and likewise as to those who defend lynching in the Philippines and condemn it here. It is debasing, revolting, brutalizing, whenever committed, and cannot be defended in the sight of God or man. It ought to be stopped everywhere.

A DEBASING EXAMPLE.

(Indianapolis is Sentinel.)

Friday the most extraordinary spectacle was presented to the American people that has been seen for many a year—that of the president of the United States marring the solemnity of Memorial day by a political stump speech bristling with the cheapest demagoguery, and without a reminder of the high purpose in which he was called to speak. It stands without parallel as to the violation of the proprieties of the occasion or lowering of the personal position of the speaker.

For years the best thought of the country has been given to the removal of sectional strife. For years children have been taught to recite "The Blue and the Gray," and to give rein to the impulse of forgiveness on Decoration Day. When the Spanish war came there was universal acclaim that the past was wiped out and that the nation was united under our common flag. Yet now comes Theodore Roosevelt, on this day, as president of this nation, and flourishes "the bloody shirt" as no republican dog-fennel or aton, has done for years. Read his words.

"There were abuses and to spare in the civil war. Your false friends then called Grant a 'butcher' and spoke of you who are listening to me as mercenaries, as 'Lincoln's hirelings.' Your open foes—as in the resolution passed by the confederate congress in October, 1862—accused you at great length, and with much particularity, of 'contemptuous disregard of the usages of civilized warfare of subjecting women and children to banishment, imprisonment and death;' of 'murder,' of 'rapine,' of 'outrages on women,' of 'lawless cruelty,' of 'perpetrating atrocities which would be disgraceful to savages;' and Abraham Lincoln was singled out for especial attack because of his 'spirit or barbarous ferocity." Verily, these men who thus foully slandered you have their heirs today in those who traduce our armies in the Philippines, who fix their eyes on individual deeds of wrong so keenly that at last they become blind to the great work of peace and freedom that has already been accomplished."

Turn now to Lincoln's speech at Gettysburg on a like occasion, when the heat of conflict was upon us, and contemplate the awfulness of the fall from Lincoln to Roosevelt. Lincoln's words are eternal. Roosevelt's are the petty piping of a politician who aims to sound a keynote for a campaign in which he aspires to be a candidate for the chief office.

Who that listened to Roosevelt had a thought of the debt of the nation to the soldiers of the civil war. There was no suggestion of it from him—nothing but a defense of his policy in the Philippines, which he sought to link to the memories of the civil war by an appeal to bitterness and hatred. It was not an effort to call up tender memories of the honored dead, but to fan to flame the almost extinguished embers of sectional strife.

Of the political merit of his speech it is unnecessary to speak at length. It is a rehash of the same propositions that have been handed out by republican senators and convention orators. He revives the slander that Lincoln ordered barbarities comparable with Gen. Smith's order to make Samar "a howling wilderness" and kill everybody over ten years of age. He urges that we are merely trying to confer "peace and freedom" on these people who object to having them. The rest is the cry of "traitor" to all who protest. And this for a Memorial day address! And from the president or the United States!

ELECTRICAL LEAKAGE.

One of the Great Dangers Which Threaten Men.

The greatest dangers which threaten man are generally invisible to the victim, and among these none is more productive of disastrous consequences than "electrical leakage," the selfsame leakage used by the natives of all hot climates to lower their temperatures. As no organic function can take place except by means of electrical currents, so it can be easily understood that if these currents leak from our bodies the loss of power must be distinctly harmful. A common instance of this loss of electricity from our bodies consists of what we call a nervous shock, the scientific explanation being that a sudden egress of electricity takes place owing to the violent mental impressions involuntarily forcing a current of power through channels which had not been previously open to receive them.

"This," remarked a scientist, "is but one case among a thousand of the ways in which we uselessly expend our vital power. The electrical waste of a person is entirely due to his surroundings—the seat upon which you sit, the table upon which you write, the floor, the ceiling, the fireplace, the rays and colors of light which surround you, all may be instrumental in absorbing your electricity, to the great detriment of your health. Red or yellow light waves excite electricity within you, blue and violet waves exhaust it, while green waves are practically neutral in their effect."

The air you breathe places you in direct communication with the walls, windows or hearth of your room; if, owing to the manner in which they are constructed, they place you in electrical communication with the soil on which your house is built, an "earth return" is formed, and the electricity in man's condenser—the train—is drawn out of the body. When one stands in the vicinity of a place of electrical exhaustion one ought to face it, as the base of the skull and spine, being the center of the nervous system, are more sensitive to outside influences than is the more covered front of the body. This is why one feels so tired when sitting with one's back to a fire; the flames serve as conductors and extract the force from the exposed nervous centers."—Pearson's Magazine.

NATURAL HISTORY.

A whale can remain under water for an hour and a half.

A lion in a jungle will jump twenty-five or thirty feet from a standing start.

A horsefly will live for hours after its head has been pulled off. The head of the mosquito hawk will continue eating its victim when separated from the thorax.

Mud wasps manifest great ingenuity not only in building their nests, but in placing them in localities where they will not be injured by rain or predatory animals.

The gray buzzard is said to be the heaviest bird that flies, the young birds when food is plentiful weighing nearly forty pounds. The bird is nearly extinct.

The wasp, like the bee and almost every other insect, is infested with parasites. Wasps have been captured which had two or three dozen parasites clinging to their bodies.

The alligator never leaves fresh water, while the crocodile often goes to sea and in the West Indies has sometimes been found many miles from land, heading directly for an island, possibly out of sight.

A Good Thing.

"I tell you, sir," said the sad eyed passenger with the bargain counter tie, "all women are born gamblers." "That's right," observed the jewelry drummer. "I know of several who played hearts to catch diamonds."—Chicago News.

FIRM FOUNDATION.

Nothing Can Undermine It in Newark.

People are sometimes slow to recognize true merit, and they cannot be blamed, for so many have been humbugged in the past. The experience of hundreds of Newark residents expressed publicly through newspapers and other sources, places Doan's Kidney Pills on a firm foundation here.

Mr. John Nelson of 41 Thirteenth street says: "When I enlisted in the 5th Ohio C Volunteers under Captain Nichols, I passed medical inspection creditably. When I was discharged my back bothered me and at intervals ever after I had attacks of kidney complaint. My back was weak and painful across the loins, and I was also greatly distressed by urinary weakness. I took every kind of medicine but it availed me nothing. I tried Doan's Kidney Pills, getting a box at Crayton's drug store. After I used them my back ceased to ache and I felt stronger. Besides mending my back they also corrected the urinary weakness. To a man 31 years of age this is a great comfort."

LIBRARY HOSPITALS

A QUIET CORNER WHERE MAILED AND AGED BOOKS ARE DOCTORED.

Delicate Operations Are Often Necessary For Injured Volumes and Much Ingenuity Is Required at Times—How Book Surgeons Work.

In every up to date public library there is a quiet corner used as a book hospital, where worn, aged and maimed volumes are sent for treatment and often surgical operations. The women and children of the library—that is, the novels and juveniles—are found in the hospital the most frequently, and often they are beyond cure. But the skillful library worker has all sorts of devices for making "broken down books" appear fresh and new again, and often a remarkable cure is effected.

If a book were cast aside the minute its back was broken or were not given proper treatment when a leaf became loose, the library would soon find itself doubling expenses for duplicates of old volumes and with little money for new works. Careful treatment, on the other hand, will add years to the life of a book and will materially lessen the expenses of a public library.

This hospital is fitted up in a very simple manner. There are shelves upon which the invalid books are placed until treatment can be given them. Then there are other shelves where they are placed to convalesce and sometimes to regain consciousness after a serious surgical operation. There are operating tables and neat little boxes in which there are eggs of black percale and yards of white percale, sheets of paraffin paper, long strips of thin but fine quality paper, narrow rolls of gummed paper, bundles of grass cloth, balls of string, sandpaper, coarse thread and white mull.

In snug little compartments is the medicine, consisting of glue and paste. The surgical instruments in a little case consist of a pair of forceps, a small wooden paddle, a thin wooden board and papers of needles. Then there is an instrument of torture—a heavy press which is generally applied at the close of an operation.

There are all sorts of complaints among the books, and the most prevalent is the broken back. This comes from the book assuming an unhealthy position, such as leaning up lazily against other books, resting on its front edges or lying flat on its side. A vigorous use of paste and glue often cures this complaint, but in some cases a delicate operation is resorted to.

Then the cover is stripped entirely off the back, and the title is carefully cut out. Next the paper back of the book is peeled off. A piece of grass cloth is then applied and firmly glued into its place. The old cover, with the exception of the title, is pasted on again, and then the book is tied up with strings and left on the shelf to recover a little. When strong enough, a black percale back is carefully fitted over the old back, and the old title is pasted on the outside.

Small fingers injure the complexion of the books greatly, and sandpaper is used a great deal on juvenile fiction invalids. The edges of the book are rubbed with this rough paper, taking off the dirt and the yellow appearance. Rough edges of leaves are frequent also in this branch of literature. These leaves are carefully trimmed off, and a thin strip of nice quality paper is pasted on to make a clean, regular edge.

"Butting" is a method of operating that is not used by all book surgeons. This consists in placing with the wooden paddle a thin line of glue on the edges of a torn leaf and then pressing them tightly together. It has been demonstrated thoroughly that this butting holds the torn leaf just as firmly as and is much more satisfactory than the old method of pasting gummed transparent paper over the torn places. The loose leaves are a frequent source of annoyance to the book doctors. The remedy for these bothersome leaves is a hinge of percale or paper, which holds the unruly page in place after the heavy press has been brought to bear on the book. In such cases the thin board is always used to slip into the "volume, so that it will keep its shape properly.

The operation which requires the most skill is the sewing of the signature or division of a book back into place. The needle and coarse thread are pushed in and out of the holes in the signature and the binding, and when it becomes awkward to use the fingers the slender forceps are used to draw the needle in and out.

It is part of the work of every public library employee to take a hand in the hospital department, and ingenuity supplies means to remedy every complaint that is conjured up by even the most erratic book. The book doctor trusts wholly to her own wit and skillful fingers to effect a cure, and there are few cases that are hopeless.—New York Mail and Express.

But Off.
"Poor child!" exclaimed Mrs. Goodart, who had been touched by the appeal to the extent of a quarter. "And how did this accident happen to your father?"

"Why," replied the bright little girl, "he begged so much money one day that he got drunk and was sent to jail."

"But you told me his arms were cut off."

"Oh, no, ma'am! I said 'alma'!"—Philadelphia Press.

By Their Crests, Perhaps.
She—So you have crossed the ocean sixty-four times. You must be getting used to it.

He—Yes, considerably. I have lately got so that I recognize over half the graves we meet.—Town and Country.

THE HEAD AND THE FOOT

[Original.]

When I was a young man, I was a reporter. One morning I was sent to interview a United States senator. He was very kind to me, and during my call it came out that we were graduates from the same college. He asked me if I had been a good student. Blushing to the roots of my hair, I confessed that I had been a very poor student.

"Don't break your heart over it," he said sympathetically. "The best scholars don't always turn out the best men." Then after pledging me to secrecy, so far as using the real names was concerned, he told me the following story:

In our class there was a man, Clarence Emmons, who led it from start to finish. He had the most astonishing mind for absorbing knowledge I ever came in contact with. His recitations were simply perfect. Often the professors used to start him at different points in the day's lesson in order to show him off. I was a graceless scamp, I am sorry to admit, whose only strong point was in making our instructors think I knew more than I did. It turned out, however, that I didn't fool them very much, for when we were graduated I stood at the foot of the class, Emmons standing first.

I did not meet Emmons for five years after leaving college. I had gone into journalism and was doing the work you are doing now. Emmons was teaching school. Neither had advanced beyond the ordinary and, so far as I was concerned, I had not given any promise. I still looked up to him, however, and remembering that some of our greatest men had put in a few years of early life at teaching, fully expected that he would make his mark.

When ten years had rolled round, I was part owner of a small country paper, and an important election coming on we happened to support the right man. After his election he came to the office, acknowledged his indebtedness and asked what he could do for us. My partner was unambiguous and referred him to me. I told him I would like to represent my party at its next presidential convention. He easily arranged the matter for me, and I became a delegate. The faculty for appearing to be a better man than I was stood by me, and I was chosen to make the nominating speech presenting one of the principal candidates. I had not mastered his available points, but substituted points desirable in a candidate and endowed him with them. I sat down amid thunders of applause and as I did so, happening to look in the gallery, saw my classmate Emmons looking down on me in astonishment. He afterwards called on me at my hotel, and when I asked him what he was doing, he said that he was still teaching.

That speech and the influence of our paper gained me several years later the nomination of my party for congress. I could talk glibly, and no matter what issue I touched, be it silver, tariff reform, civil service, I had the faculty of making my hearers believe that I knew all about it and was dead right every time. I was elected and re-elected for two additional terms. When I made my speech on the tariff that produced such a sensation, for the first time in my life I had collected some facts, but I pledge you my word I didn't know and don't know now which is the true theory, tariff or free trade. While I was talking I saw Emmons in the gallery following me with absorbing interest. After the speech he sent his card to me, and I went out and met him.

"What are you doing, Emmons?" I asked.

"Teaching," he replied.

Meanwhile I had become convinced that if I were slow in absorbing knowledge I could make more than most men out of what I did absorb. As I grew older I accustomed myself to look wiser, and whenever approached by men upon different subjects I looked wise in proportion to my ignorance. But when I knew the subject well I invariably pleaded ignorance and begged to be enlightened. In this way I gained in respect and flattered those with whom I came in contact.

Well, the next step for a representative is to be senator. I didn't begin my senatorial contest by obliging people. I had got beyond that. I let them understand that they were to oblige me and the other part of it might come later. In this way I forced my election. Recently, you will remember, my name was mentioned for the most important portfolio in the cabinet. A few days later my old classmate Clarence Emmons called on me.

"I hear you are to become one of the president's advisers," he said mournfully.

"It isn't so, Emmons," I said confidentially. "You will remember that in college I had one faculty."

"Yes; you could make more out of nothing than any man in the class."

"Right. I've kept on learning how to do that. I'm working my infinitesimal qualities to by the president himself."

"I believe you'll succeed."

"What are you doing, Emmons?"

"Teaching."

"Doing well?"

"I can't get my income above a thousand a year. Can't you do something for me here?"

"I shall need all the offices at my disposal for substantial purposes, but I need a secretary. Would you take the position?"

"At how much salary?"

"Leave that to me. I will not be nigardly with the best man in our class, for I remember I was the worst."

EDISON'S NEW STORAGE BATTERY.

Cost of Maintenance Less Than Expense of Horse and Wagon —Noted Inventor Expects to Make Machines So Cheap as to Displace Present Methods.

An Advocate telegram on May 28, from Orange, N. J., told of the successful invention by Thos. A. Edison of a new storage battery which in the "Wizard's" estimation solves the problem of electrical transportation and when Thomas A. Edison says a thing it may be relied upon.

Small Cost of New Auto.
 * The cost of a good delivery horse is$80
 * The cost of the wagon is 55
 * The cost of the harness is 15
 * The total cost of a good delivery outfit$150
 * Cost to which the new light storage battery will bring the delivery automobile.....$150
 * Cost of maintenance of the storage battery infinitely less than *
 * cost of horse and wagon.—Estimated by Thomas A. Edison.

The difficulties and troubles that confronted Thomas A. Edison, the wizard of electricity, in his efforts to perfect his new storage battery, which will solve the problem of the successful electric auto, were many and varied. Most scientists had agreed that no metal would ever be found which would take the place of lead.

In finishing explaining his work and hopes, Mr. Edison said:

"My experiments have already proved to me what I have long been convinced of, that the battery is an entire success. I know that it will run an automobile, over ordinary roads, 100 miles without recharging. But that there may be no mistake, I shall keep up the experimenting for several months. I never had to apologize for one of my inventions, and I do not intend to begin now."

Mr. Edison was seen in his laboratory in New Jersey the past week and asked what the effect will be upon the horse.

"Within six or eight years 80 per cent of all the vehicles used will be propelled by electricity. This means the passing of the horse, and it also means that, through gaining the room now taken up by the horse and the greater expedition with which the automobile can be handled, the city streets can accommodate four times as many vehicles as at present. Moreover, electricity and the light storage battery will be used on vessels at sea and on all the transportation lines."

"The man that cannot quite afford to keep a horse and carriage is the man that I am trying to provide for. The automobile will be the thing to him. Its first cost will not be any greater, it will not require the care, and the cost of maintenance will come far below the cost of keeping a horse."

The batteries in Mr. Edison's invention are composed of tiny bricks of specially prepared iron and nickel. By renewing the water supply the cell is kept in good condition. The time of charging the battery is much less than that required for other batteries. Those now being used in the experiments have twenty-one cells, and each weighs about fifteen pounds. Each battery will outlast two automobiles. The equipment may be placed on any steam or electric machine, and the affair is so simple that any novice can soon master it.

Just as soon as the experiments are concluded Mr. Edison will begin the exclusive manufacture of the batteries at Glen Ridge, N. J. A factory is now in operation there capable of 100-horse power each day, or enough for eight of the batteries now being used. This will be increased in capacity to provide, if necessary, for 50,000 horse power. To bring the cost of the battery to a minimum will be the constant endeavor. There are two entirely new chemicals employed in the battery. The works for their manufacture have been erected at Silver Lake.

Mr. Edison was asked to relate the progress of the invention.

"It was hard work," he said, "very hard work. It was one-two-three-four-five, in that order, the hardest work that I ever did. I started three years ago. I'll have to charge the public for one stomach, though," he said, laughing. "Mine has become all mixed up, working over that battery. Yes, the public owes me one stomach."

"See here, here is an illustration of what I was against." The inventor picked up a book. "Here is what one of the best chemical authorities said. It is highly improbable if any other than the lead type of storage cells will ever be successfully used."

"That is just what I have done," said Mr. Edison, smiling. "I have brought two other types to perfection—nickel and light iron. Heretofore acids and lead have been used. I am using alkalis."

"What did I mean by one, two, three? Why, absence of deterioration by work, large storage capacity per unit of mass, capability of being rapidly charged and discharged, capability of withstanding careless treatment, and inexpensiveness. And I have them all—one, two, three, four and five."

When the wizard was asked to pose for a snapshot he smilingly consented.

PEOPLE WHO WRITE.

Some Personal Gossip About Well Known Authors.

[Special Correspondence.]
 New York, June 2.—It is said that Hamilton Garfield got the idea which was to develop into "The Captain of the Gray Horse Troop," recently published by the Harpers, away back in 1897. At that time he went in company with a young lieutenant who was stationed at Fort Custer to see him inspect a drove of cattle which had been brought into the Crow Indian agency for sale to the government for the use of the Indians. The lieutenant, noting the poor condition of the animals, rejected the entire herd in spite of the demonstrative anger of the cattlemen. Mr. Garfield was impressed by the undaunted action and few words of the young army officer, and the character of Captain Curtis took form in his mind. It set him wondering as to the possible power of a man like that if he were appointed Indian agent. The lieutenant who inspired the thought is now a captain and is the head of the forestry department in the Philippines.

Mark Twain once had a trying experience with a compositor. He had received from his publishers the proofs of a story which he considered as funny as anything he had ever written, but on reading the proofs he dismally discovered that the fun had been carefully taken out. Mr. Clemens returned the proofs, congratulating the compositor upon having consumed "only one week in making sense of a story which he himself had required two weeks to make nonsense of."

The telephone has a new terror for authors. Mr. Henry Edward Rood, author of "Hardwicke," which the Harpers have just published, was "called up" the other day by an unknown feminine reader of his book, who inquired if he was responsible for "Hardwicke," to which Mr. Rood pleaded guilty.

"Well, when did you live in —?" said the voice over the wire.

"Never," replied Mr. Rood promptly. "What! Never lived in —?" came the skeptical answer. "That's very strange, as you've described our church row to a T and even our minister. Why, everybody has recognized him. And you say you never lived in —? Humph! Very strange! I don't believe you. Goodby."

A new writer, Josiah M. Ward, takes his readers back to the times of Nebuchadnezzar and the last days of Nineveh. The title of his book, "Come With Me Into Babylon," is a pleasant promise which challenges attention. One expects something more than a glimpse into the lives of the Babylonians, whose name has come to be a synonym of luxury and wantonness. Those were heroic days really, when the greatest nations of that remote antiquity engaged in a fierce struggle for the mastery of the world.

"Wonderful magnetic eyes" are the words which report says belong to the Scotch physician who is the original of Conan Doyle's Sherlock Holmes. He is good looking, has a fatherly charm of manner, a swift, swinging gait and a general air of protective kindness, and, it is added, "he has been by no means flattered in Dr. Doyle's presentation of his hero."

William Dean Howells says that his new novel, "The Kentons," was the original germ of "Their Silver Wedding Journey." It was his intention to take the middle western Kenton family to Europe, to relate minutely their new experiences and to call the story "The Discovery of Europe." But as he proceeded and Ellen Kenton's love affair progressed he found that this young woman and her sentimental experiences and trials quite dominated the book, so he laid it aside for future development. It was not until recently that Mr. Howells completed the story and brought his young heroine in safely through a series of excitements which completely upset the quiet Kenton family. RICHARD TUPPER.

MEMORIAL DAY

EX-SOLDIER MAKES PERTINENT SUGGESTIONS

Regarding the Proper Observance of Decoration and Memorial Day in Newark.

(Communicated.)

Are Decoration day and Memorial day degenerating? When the custom of paying a nation's highest tribute to her heroes was inaugurated there was one grand memorial meeting where all soldiers united. There were no factions—all were equal—the living defenders and the dead heroes; none asked whether they served three years or a hundred days; none asked what particular army the dead were enlisted in; none asked to what church or society he belonged but just one grand testimonial from a grateful people in honor of the truest patriotism, that of having answered their country's call in the defense of the union.

All churches and societies should join with the honorably discharged soldiers of all wars on the day set (Decoration day) and once a year without any factional feelings pay the nation's tribute of decorating the graves and paying respect to those who sleep in unknown graves. This, one of the greatest promoters of patriotism, should be a lesson to the rising generation and should be taught on one day and at one great gathering.

The modern idea, I am sorry to say, is causing divisional lines to be drawn when the different soldier organizations hold separate services on different days, both Memorial and Decoration. It causes the youth to wonder, and he is also given a chance to more highly honor the lucky volunteer who passed through our national conflict with years of service without a scratch than the hero who was wounded or gave his life for the old flag in the first battle.

I would suggest that we go back to the good old days of 1870. Everyone who wishes should be given the privilege of donating flowers and in the morning of decoration day decorate the graves of all soldiers, and instead of a half dozen Sunday memorial services, let us have but one and that a joint union service at Memorial hall on the afternoon of the day observed (Decoration day). If these petty jealousies are to come up every year it will certainly cause the rising generation to lose its respect for their country. Let our motto be "One flag, one country and one memorial day."

KNAUSS-PARKS

Wedding Took Place at Noon Thursday—Dr. and Bride Leave for the East.

Dr. W. H. Knauss and Miss Etta Parks, daughter of the late John C. Parks, freight agent for the B. & O. railway at this point, were married at high noon today. The Doctor has kept his friends guessing as to when the happy event was to take place, and but few of them were aware of the exact time of its consummation. The ceremony, which took place at the home of the bride, 125 Hudson avenue, was performed by the Rev. J. C. Schindel, pastor of the St. Paul's Lutheran church, in the presence only of the immediate families of the contracting parties, and Miss Alma Landenslager, of Tiffin, who acted as bridesmaid and Mr. R. W. Knauss, brother of the groom, who acted as best man. Upon the completion of the ceremony, the congratulations of those present were tendered the happy couple after which all sat down to a sumptuous wedding feast. Dr. and Mrs. Knauss left on the noon Pan Handle train for an extended wedding trip through the East and upon their return home, will reside at 125 Hudson avenue.

While this is not the largest well in the Licking county field by any means, it is not a bad one. The Mt. Vernon company is now engaged in putting down wells in a number of new sites and it is quite likely that a number of good wells will be drilled in before many weeks. Another well is being drilled on the farm of Dr. A. T. Fulton, of Mt. Vernon, which will come in within a short time.

SICK GIRL

WAS'NT GIVEN PROPER KIND OF ATTENTION

At Delaware it is Now Alleged so Further Investigation May Follow.

Columbus, Ohio, June 5.—Harriet Phillips, colored, aged 16, was returned to her home in this city yesterday from the Delaware Industrial Home in such physical condition that her friends will demand a further investigation of affairs at the institution. It is learned that in March last the Phillips girl stepped on a nail. The girl says she received but four calls from the physician during the three months she was sick.

She tells how she was laid across a bed or chair and beaten with boards. She says she was struck in her sides by the Matron, Martha Rowe, who used her fists. AUTO PROBLEM SOLVED

Edison Says His New Battery Is a Success.

LIGHTER METALS USED FOR IT.

Inventor Expects Storage Power to Be Good For a Five Thousand Mile Trip—Says It Is Now Up to Automobile Manufacturers to Produce a Cheap Carriage.

"It is now up to the manufacturers of automobiles to produce a cheap carriage," said Thomas A. Edison the other day. "I have, after three years of hard work, solved the problem of an electrical storage battery which can be used for long distance work and which will wear three or four automobiles out before it will succumb itself."

This statement was made to a New York Times reporter at the inventor's laboratory in West Orange, N. J. Mr. Edison was evidently delighted over the situation. On May 23 of last year it was announced that the inventor had nearly completed his storage battery, and work has been going on ever since. On last Friday (May 23) Mr. Edison equipped an ordinary electric runabout with batteries of twenty-one cells and a total weight of 332 pounds net for a trial spin.

"I sent my two men, Fleiss and Bee, out for the test," said the inventor in describing the experiment. "I told them to go over some heavy roads and up some steep hills. They went to Paterson, covering some sixty-two miles, the grades averaging from 2 to 12 per cent. When the machine came back, only 17 per cent of the original speed had been lost and but seven out of the original twenty-nine volts had been sacrificed."

"On Monday (May 26) I sent these men out again on roads that were heavy from the rain. I told them to run the machine until it stopped, but they had gone eighty-five miles before the battery gave out. A few days before I had gone over the same roads in a high power gasoline vehicle, but when we got to the steep hills the gasoline engine nearly stopped. The hills made absolutely no impression upon my electrical machine."

The peculiarity of most of the batteries now used is that lead is used in a solution of acid. The lead makes these batteries extremely heavy, so that about 125 pounds of weight is necessary for each horsepower produced. The best of these batteries will not run more than about forty miles without recharging, and this process takes several hours.

"I realized," continued Mr. Edison, "that the problem would never be solved with a lead battery, so I set out to secure some combination of other metals which would produce the desired effect. At last I hit upon a combination of steel and nickel suspended in an alkaline solution. The principle is entirely different from the electrical batteries now in use."

"It was my idea to construct a battery which would not be cumbersome, heavy, which would have fine wearing powers and which would not need attention. These hopes are realized in the new battery. 'It is about the same size as the ones now used, but the lighter metals make it possible to secure one horsepower from every 533 pounds weight. I am now making a battery for a bicycle. It will give a horsepower for forty pounds weight, and machines can be made still lighter, but they are comparatively more expensive."

"These batteries will run for 100 miles or more without charging. They can be charged in a few hours. They require no attention, for all that is needed to replenish the liquid is to pour in a little water every now and then to take the place of that which has evaporated. I do not know how long it would take to wear out one of the batteries, for we have not yet been able to exhaust the possibilities of one of them, but I feel sure one will last longer than four or five automobiles."

"I am going to start an automobile out in a few days for an endurance test of 5,000 miles. I shall make five separate tests of this kind with different machines, and if I do not produce a battery that will last for more than 5,000 miles I won't sell a single one of them."

In Mr. Edison's new battery the plates are contained in a neat steel case, 12 inches high by 6 by 4 inches. The interior of this case is lined with an insulating material which resists the action of the potassium hydrate used in the cells. It is the intention of the inventor to begin immediately the manufacture of the new machines at his recently equipped factory in Glen Ridge, N. J.

Chinese Farm School.

A Chinese farm school, where youthful Celestials can learn how to become intelligent tillers of the soil instead of crowding into Chinatown, as now, is a proposed innovation against which the residents of Crofton, near Bristol, Pa., are up in arms, says the Philadelphia Record. The buildings will be Chinese in design, and a Chinese cemetery, with a Chinese temple, will also be provided. The cemetery will take up about fifteen acres out of forty-eight purchased. The balance of the property will be turned into a model farm. It is also in contemplation to provide a school there, where the Chinese will be instructed in English and where every effort will be made to improve them. The school, which will start with fifty Chinamen, is exciting a good deal of interest among local Celestials.

THE MAN AT OLD TOM'S

(Copyright, 1902, by the S. S. McClure Company.)

Even the chops looked lonely at Old Tom's on that December night. Business had detained me late at the office, for Wall street was on the verge of one of its frequent crises. I had slipped out for dinner at the old chop-house. The exertions of the day and the nervous strain under which I had been placed had made me feel singularly depressed. My low spirits did not rise even at the sight of a steaming combination chop and a mug of the mustiest brew. I almost leaped for joy when the form of Dick Travis appeared in the doorway. Travis had been a friend of mine at Harvard, and a more jovial, whole souled companion I had never known. I arose and welcomed him with cordiality. As I took his hand I noticed that it was cold. He wore no overcoat, and his clothing seemed to be thin and of poor quality, yet for all that he was the same Dick Travis that I had known in Hasty Pudding theatricals. I ordered dinner for two, and over mugs of ale I forgot Wall street and the great god Mammon and thought only of Travis and his merry stories.

"And how have things been going with you, old man?" I asked.

A look of pain came over the face of the man. He leaned forward. His cold hand rested upon my wrist. "I have a confession to make," he said. "It is against my pride to say it, but before I came in here I had not had a mouthful to eat for three days. The stage has not been kind to me. I was a failure."

"Nonsense!" I said lightly. "Do not scare me like that again. I had almost forgotten that I was talking to a gentleman whose name of Travis masquerades under that of Richard Blackston, the romantic young actor."

"I am sorry that I startled you," resumed Travis. "You must get used to jokes of this kind."

He leaned back in his chair and looked at me until it seemed that his eyes glowed like coals of fire.

"Good night," he said. "I'm sorry to have annoyed you with one of my disagreeable moods. You won't see me again."

"Come, come, Travis!" I exclaimed. "Go back to the office with me. I'll only be detained there for a few minutes and then come up to the house. You need a few days of rest."

"Did you call me, sir?"

Peter, the waiter, was speaking. "I was talking to Mr. Travis," I said, with some show of annoyance.

The waiter looked puzzled. He glanced about him. "Old Tom," the proprietor of the chop-house, was nodding near the ale pumps. He, the waiter and I were the sole occupants of the room.

"Where is Mr. Travis?" I asked.

"Don't know him, sir," replied the waiter.

"The gentleman who just dined with me," I said.

The waiter stared. I asked for my check. The bit of paper bore the charge for only one service. The table in front of me was bare. I could have sworn that I saw nobody remove the blue china plate and the pewter mug which had been placed in front of Dick Travis.

"The check," I said—"it is for one. It should be for two."

Tom Halloran glanced at the addition.

"Oh, yes," he said. "The gentleman who was with you left very hurriedly. I don't think you noticed him. He paid his own check."

"Yes," chimed in the waiter glibly. "I remember now, sir."

The chop-house keeper turned away. If ever a lie shone in the face of a man, it appeared in the countenance of the waiter, yet I could have blessed him for his mendacity.

When I reached the office, I found that everything was in an uproar. My partner grabbed me by the shoulder and whirled me around.

"We have been looking everywhere for you," he said. "Where in the world have you been? Sent to every restaurant in this part of town."

"I was at Old Tom's," I answered.

"What possessed you to go to an old rookery like that? Dining with the souls of the departed? Here is your man, sergeant. Does he look as though he had committed suicide?"

"Not much!" said the person addressed, a tall fellow, with a coal black mustache, as he advanced toward me. "Whoever the man was, sir, he had your card in his hand when we found him. Looks as though he had been thinking about you, doesn't it?"

"I'll call up headquarters and see if they have another identification." He emerged from the telephone booth a few minutes later. "It's all right," he said. "His name was Travis. Found the name on one of the pockets of his coat-tailor's label, you know. Say he was an actor. Do you know him?"

It was a month before I was again at my office. The doctors told me that Wall street was enough to rack the nerves of an iron idol and that they wondered that half of the men on 'change did not die of brain fever.

Poor Travis had committed suicide at the hour when I believed that I had first greeted him. Old Tom's chop-house has been closed up, and its smoke blackened fixtures have gone under the hammer. I would that the memories of that dinner could be as easily scattered as were the effects of the old restaurant which is soon to be removed from the sight of man.

Columbus 1, Louisville 3.
Columbus lost a close and exciting pitchers' battle to Louisville Wednesday by a score of 3 to 1. McMakin and Dunkle being the opposing twirlers. Columbus made 5 hits and no errors, Louisville 7 hits and 3 errors.

Lajoie Played.
Napoleon Lajoie played his first game with Cleveland Wednesday, 10,000 people being present to welcome the great player. He accepted five chances at second, made a two base hit and figured in two fast double plays.

Honest Modesty.
Jackson who covered left for the New York Giants was released Wednesday and McDonald who played right Monday and Tuesday, told Secretary Knowles that he did not think himself fast enough for the National League, and left for his home in Delaware. Such instances are rare. The Giants broke their losing streak, winning from Chicago Wednesday 4 to 3 in ten innings.

American Jockey Won.
"Skeets" Martin, the American jockey who won the Epsom Derby in England, the greatest race in the world, on Wednesday, was lionized by the American contingent who attended the race, including Ambassador and Mrs. Choate, Richard Croker and others. The betting was 100 to 7 against the winner Ard Patrick, but Martin took him out in front at the start and won all the way. Danny Maher also won a good race.

Zanesville Goes to Cambridge.
Manager T. C. Fowler of the Zanesville base ball club on Wednesday afternoon closed a deal whereby his crack team of ball tossers will represent Cambridge on week days, playing in that city, and on Sundays playing in Zanesville. This was the arrangement Mr. Fowler wanted to make for his team with Newark parties, but the negotiations fell through. The grounds will be opened at Cambridge next Saturday which means that Zanesville will not be seen in Newark on that date.

Denison 29—Picked Team 0.
A couple of nines from this city including a picked number of players from the Newark club went to Granville Wednesday afternoon and essayed to play baseball with the strong Denison team with the result that they were slaughtered 29 to 0. Robert Fulton pitched the last five innings for the picked team after the game had already been hopelessly lost. Denison batted hard throughout the contest, and also fielded well. Order, Graesser, Heisey and several other players of the Newark team, did not go to Granville. The college boys simply outclassed their opponents.

National League Meeting.
At the National League meeting in New York this week, the protest by New York against the two games won by Chicago in the latter city on May 7 and 8, was allowed, and the games were ordered replayed, one on July 7, and the other one August 18. The protest was entered after it was discovered that the pitcher's distance was short.

Fred Tenney's appeal for a reconsideration of the penalty imposed upon him for his part in the fight with Fred Clarke in Pittsburg, was disallowed.

Dreyfuss Will Back Pirates.
Barney Dreyfuss, president of the Pittsburg club, has made an offer which is very likely to be accepted by the team which wins the American League pennant. "I am willing to back my team to the extent of $5,000 for a series of five games with the team which wins the American league pennant," said Barney. "I am willing that the opposing team may take on any player in the American league, to strengthen up with. I think the Pittsburg team is the best ball team in the country, and, though I do not care to be personally interested in a post season series, I am willing to put up the money for my men and let the winner of the series also take the entire gate receipts. I think this is a fair proposition and it should bring about a series of games after October 15."

Game at Granville.
Newark lovers of the National game will have a rare opportunity of witnessing one of the swiftest and strongest games of ball ever played in this vicinity on Saturday afternoon of this week. On this date the two strongest college teams in the state, Wooster and Denison, will cross bats on the new Athletic Grounds in Granville. This will be the opening of the new grounds, being the first game played by college teams. Wooster team has won an enviable reputation this season for her ball playing, having lost only two games during the entire season (by poor umpiring) and as Denison has also been playing great ball this season a rattling good game may be expected. The game will be called promptly at 3 o'clock. It is expected that a large number of the lovers of the game in this city will go up to Granville Saturday afternoon to witness the game.

Delightfully Surprised.

On last Saturday evening a number of the friends of Miss Viola Cupp, assembled at her home near Pataskala, to remind her that it was the sixteenth anniversary of her birth. At eight o'clock the guests assembled to find Miss Cupp and her mother visiting a neighbor half a mile away. On returning at nine o'clock Miss Cupp walked into a well filled room of waiting guests, to which she was welcomed with merry laughter. The evening was spent in games of all kinds, seasoned with elegant refreshments, consisting of ice cream, strawberries, cake, oranges, bananas and lemonade. The tables were decorated with carnations and roses. After all had partaken of the feast they repaired to the parlor, to listen to some beautiful music rendered by Misses Blanch Williams and Ethel Porter. Those present were Misses Ida Slough and two sisters, Blanche Williams, Clara Butler, Otis Headley, Philip Mazel, Willie Williams, Glen Porter, Thomas Parker and Walter Schaub. After we were all comfortably seated at the table, her father surprised her still more by placing an elegant gold watch and chain before her. At a late hour the guests dispersed feeling they had been highly entertained and wishing her many more happy birthday surprises.
